The Merrimae's Prow. Half covered with snow among a pile of old iron beams at Chew and Essor streets is on irregularly-shaped mass of iron weighing about 600 pounds, which played no small part in determining the present form of building stips of war, and which wrought over a million dollars damage to the United States government. It is the prow or ram of the famous Confederate irondad Merrimac, which revolutionized naval wasfare. The Merrimac's battle in Hampton Ruds with the United States first is without a parallel, and the terrible prow with which the frigate Cumber and was sent to the bottom was lest in this regar mant. Is original shape was that of a roge V. The point was solid for nearly two feet and the arms by which the ram was fitted to the Merri mac's now were each about eight feet long and about a foot wide. In the Merrimac's ploage against the Comperland this year trated to is secket, and as the Merrimac swung around it was proken off. One of the arms remained on the Merrimac, but the point, with the other arm, was torn from its fretenings and remained in the Comberland. Mesars, M. T. Horner & Co. bought it with o ber government et res as old metal at Norfolk after the war closed, and it has been lying in almost its present position ever since. It was evidently made of old boiler plates, for a copped edge shows that it is made of layers of iron, each about a this made of layers of iron, each about a querter of an inch thick. It has been identified as the Merrimon's now by Mr. H. A. Ramsay, who was chief engineer of this ship leavers at temps have been made to buy it, tut while the intrinsic value of the relials not much more than $10 or $15 it is not far sale at any price. It me time ago Mr. Horner had a place broken off and had a fac simile of the Merrimso made of it for Mr. Dougles H. Thomas President of the Merchanis'
